13 DEAD, 7 NEAR DEATH IN CAR-BUS COLLISION

She Almost Needed It

HERE'S RUTH ELDER, flying beauty, who nearly came to grief on her Trans-Atlantic trip, and her Pilot, George Haldemann, trying on those non-sinkable suits that might have come in handy if the Dutch oil tanker hadn't been conveniently near.

Women Aviators Meet Today At Cross-Roads Of Atlantic

(By Universal Service Special Cable Dispatch)
HORTA, AZORES, Oct. 14.—Two young and pretty women with the same ambition to fly across the Atlantic will meet in this little Portuguese seaport tomorrow.
One of them, Ruth Elder of Florida, is expected in the morning aboard the slow-moving Dutch oil tanker that rescued her and her companion from the sea when their plane, the "American Girl" was forced down by a broken oil line.
The other, Lilli Dillenz of Vienna, zoomed into port early this afternoon aboard the giant German seaplane, D-1230, westward bound for the American continent that her rival so recently left.
Miss Elder was co-pilot with Captain George Haldemann of the unfortunate but lucky "American Girl."
Mademoiselle Dillenz is an avowed passenger aboard a powerful seaplane manned by the best of Germany's pilots and mechanics.
But both were possessed of the same ambition. Each wanted to be the first woman to fly over the Atlantic. Horta is all agog for the meeting of the two at the little cross-roads in mid-Atlantic. Miss Elder is expected to continue on to Paris, the magnet that lures all women.
The "American Girl's" spectacular start and miraculous rescue keep her in the foreground, but the Austrian actress's chances for being the first to fly from one shore of the Atlantic to the other are easily the best. The German aviators and their fair companion are most desirous of meeting the daring American pair before resuming their journey.

BODIES HURLED FROM SCENE OF FATAL CRASH

Death Enters On Party Of Revelers On Way To Barn Dance

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 14.—Thirteen persons are dead and seven more are so seriously injured that their life is feared for as result of a traction car and bus wreck here tonight.
A traction car on the Newcastle division of the Union Traction Co., of Indiana struck a trailer loaded with members of the Sahara Grotto at the Emerson avenue crossing.
The trailer was attached to a truck also loaded with members of the Grotto. The truck cleared the tracks but the interurban struck the trailer in the center, and carried parts of it far up the track. Bodies were hurled yards away from the scene of the crash which long has been noted as a dangerous spot.
The front compartment of the traction car was demolished and it is believed some of the dead were passengers on it.
The members of the Grotto were on their way to a barn dance which was to have been given near the scene of the tragedy.
The crossing is unprotected by signal lights, gates or a watchman. It is reported and a barn obstructs the view on one side of the tracks.

Windrem Drops Suit Against City And Parr

Announcement of the dismissal of the suit brought by Attorney Lee D. Windrem, as a taxpayer of Richmond, against the City of Richmond, city officials and the Parr Terminal company, restraining the city and the Parr company from executing a lease on harbor properties, was made yesterday by City Attorney Thomas M. Carlson and T. H. DeLap, attorney for the Parr interests, and Windrem. A dismissal signed by Windrem was forwarded yesterday to the Contra Costa county superior court in Martinez.

LITIGATION ENDED
As a result of Windrem's action all pending litigation affecting the validity of the lease between the city and the Parr company for waterfront lands and wharves has been brought to an end and the last obstacle in the way of the Parr company operating the local harbor has been removed.

Shortly after the lease of the harbor was signed by the City and Parr in 1926, and after the city had ejected the Richmond Terminal corporation, former operators of the wharves, Windrem brought suit. He was represented by Attorney M. H. Peterson of San Francisco, who yesterday also signed the dismissal.

"NO CO-OPERATION"
Lack of co-operation on the part of the public to back him in his recent efforts to circulate a petition against the granting of the 50-year lease was given by Windrem yesterday as the reason for dropping the suit.

"I have publicly stated on several occasions that if the people did not rally behind me in my efforts to referendum the Parr lease I would drop the whole matter. The people have shown little or no interest in the lease therefore I decided to dismiss the suit I had begun."

Akimo claimed that he had loaned the woman his car for a ten-day trip and that she failed to return the car. Ramos was arrested with her in Los Angeles and brought here. Akimo testified that he had not loaned the car to the woman until after he had driven with her as far as Hayward. Ramos was not with them at the time.

Appalling Fire Loss In U. S. Occasions Prevention Week

The present week which has been set aside by the President of the United States and various State governors as Fire Prevention Week presents an excellent opportunity for each citizen to consider the matter of fire waste and to cooperate with the local authorities to make a reduction in fire losses possible during the coming year, according to Fire Chief W. P. Cooper. To realize fully the extent of this national fire waste it should be considered from an individual and community standpoint. In 1926 the per capita fire loss was nearly $5.00. At this rate the average loss to a community would be approximately $125,000 for each 25,000 inhabitants. Such a sum of money would assist materially in improving streets and sanitation facilities, building school houses and otherwise bettering municipal conditions. When, on the other hand, property valued at that amount is destroyed by fire, the community and the entire nation is a tremendous loser for that much material wealth has been irretrievably destroyed.

WISE BUYING OF FEED AND FUEL
Buying right is as important to the business man as selling at a profit. In fact he cannot sell at a profit if he does not buy to advantage.
Buying right is equally important to the family. The time to buy feed, for instance, is when prices are lowest. The time to buy fuel during warm weather, because others usually wait until it is cold before they order their fuel and when there is little or no market for a commodity the price declines. The place to buy feed and fuel is listed in the Buyers Guide on the classified page.

MODERN WOMAN'S WANTS

Good providers, homes of their own, and babies are not enough to satisfy the wants of the modern woman.

Her spiritual needs must be satisfied the same as her physical ones, Edith Mae Cummings, millionaire real estate operator who travelled from a telephone switchboard to the president's office of her own company in less than four years, told a group of women in an address at Detroit.

"The new woman demands that her home be something more than a shelter in which to sleep and eat," said Mrs. Cummings at the Edith Mae Cummings School of Business Science for Women. "Her husband must be a companion as well as a provider. If she has children, she is as concerned with the development of their minds as the building of their bodies."

"The women of today are in revolt against the humdrum of their mother's day. Whether they are married and mistresses of their own homes or unmarried and clock-punchers in the establishments of others, they refuse to work merely for room and board. Scientific inventions that have eliminated their home drudgery have fired them with a desire to be partners with men in new undertakings."

"All that keeps women from full enjoyment of their new prerogatives is their limited knowledge of themselves. They must be taught to analyze their own talents with the cold scrutiny of a laboratory technician. They must learn to direct their ambitions into those fields in which lie their talents. They must select their vocations according to their talents. It makes no difference whether a woman's choice leads her into banking, real estate, telephone operating, home making, catering, or factory work. Success knows no sex."

Disarmament is the process by which a country which has several obsolete battleships displaces them with nice, new, shiny cruisers—Omaha Bee.

The wise guy who used to pretend that he knew all about women has a successor in the fellow who thinks he understands the Einstein theory of relativity.

According to the New York Times a noted French observer declares that the League of Nations is sick and needs our aid. Probably he would suggest the gold cure, eh?

J. Ogden Armour's estate dwindled from $200,000,000 to $1,022,500, and yet most of us would be willing to appear satisfied with what was left.

AFFECTION IS THE ROD THAT RULES THIS TYPE

If the forehead is excessively developed at the top, as in this illustration, it indicates the power to think deeply, to theorize, to inspire. This is the forehead of the philosopher, the dreamer, the slow, careful thinker. This person thinks better than he sees. His brain development shows great imagination. A thinker like this delves way out into the great mysteries. He plunges the depths where few persons go.

Study and reflection are his enjoyment. It is hardly too much to say that to this dreamer life speaks a different language from that addressed to the other types.

The world of things, of materialism, makes no appeal. He lives his life in quiet places, dreaming dreams and seeing the visions of the poet, the philosopher, the musician. The rocks hills and waters all have a message for him.

The composer whose marvelous imagination makes it possible for him to write a great symphony without hearing a note actually played by the instruments is of this type.

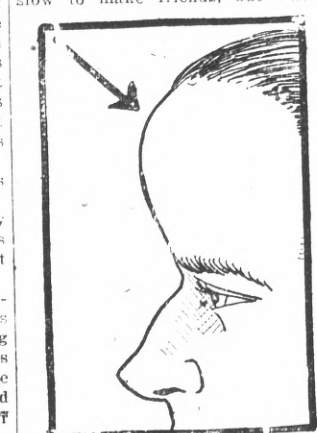

Persons with this highly developed reflective brain are intuitive, not practical. They are temperamentally unfitted to live the busy rushing life of money kings or executives of large corporations.

A Home Lover

This dreamer is of a retiring nature, mild and quiet, a lover of home. He enjoys recalling his own childhood memories. Living so much within one's self, he is introspective or looking in upon one's own reflections. In upon one's own reflections, he is prone to become melancholy. Life looks more gloomy to them than to the bustling active man.

selling groceries or plowing a field.

This man is given to moods. He is affectionate and lovable and inclined to be lonely when left entirely to himself. He is slow to make friends, but when once he accepts a man or woman into the inner shrine of friendship, he never shifts in his loyalty. He is extremely courteous in manner, slow to anger, and slow to forgive.

Affection is the only rod by which he can be ruled. He cannot be driven. This forehead development is usually seen in brunets.

To impress a man of this reflective nature, one should speak slowly, giving the story in detail. It is well to paint a picture.

The highest good can be attained by such philosophic dreamers when they have learned to control moods, not to be mastered by them.

Exercise and close communion with the great out of doors is one of the best means of banishing gloom.

YOUR MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

By Patricia Lee

After twelve years of happy married life, R. T. has found a new love. He wishes to free himself from the wife who has been faithful all these years and who has given him three lovely children. My advice in a case of this kind is, "Make haste slowly." The chances are that R. T. will find out when it is too late that his "grande passion" for the new friend is merely a passing fancy.

SAYS THE MAN

Dear Patricia Lee— I am a married man—have been for twelve years, and have three well-behaved healthy children. My wife is a good woman, has made a comfortable home for me, and is a good, self-sacrificing mother. While I have always respected and admired my wife I never knew what real life was until recently when I became attached to a girl who works in my office. I feel that I cannot live without this girl, and am willing to give everything up for her. Of course I will see that my wife and children are provided for, but I dread breaking the news to her. For six months I have been going out together, but I have managed to keep our relations a secret, R. T.

Before you take the fatal step you want to make sure that your feeling for this young woman is not a temporary infatuation that will wear off under the strain of everyday life. It smacks of forbidden fruit to me, and in my opinion will lose its flavor once the bans are lifted. It is both selfish and cowardly to keep the matter secret. When the affair does come to light, you will doubtless be despised by both women. You are even degrading the girl you claim to love, by making that love seem cheap. The only way you will find real happiness is by being honest with yourself and on the level with others. Tell your wife of your feelings for the girl and your wish to be free and of your willingness to provide for her and the children. Of course it will be a cruel blow, but it is the only honorable thing to do. But again let me suggest that you make haste slowly.

It is a wise wife who realizes that a man doesn't put on dark glasses when he marries, and who keeps herself neat and attractive in spite of household cares and responsibilities. The successful wife plans her work so as to have a few moments of freedom each day in which to keep fit. She acknowledges the virtue of toilet water as well as dish water.

SAYS THE WOMAN

Dear Patricia Lee— My husband is always complaining because I never have time to go out with him, he nags me because I do not take time to dress. He thinks I am a poor manager, because I lack the time for such things. Now, I have two children and an apartment to care for. I am an immaculate housekeeper and take good care of the children. I set a good table and am economical, and I can't see where my husband has any right to complain. Has a husband any right to ask more of a wife than that she make a pleasant home for him, give him good food and care for the children? Now I don't want you to think that I am a slovenly woman, but I have neither the time nor the inclination for silly gossaws and good times. LORA

It is hardly a question of what husbands have a right to expect. Lora, in this business of being happily married. We women must take into consideration what is likely to happen if we don't keep ourselves neat and attractive and go out with our husbands occasionally. It makes no difference how good we may be as a housekeeper and mother, all of our work counts for naught if we allow ourselves to become a frowsy drudge. Certainly a woman with two kiddies, and a house to care for has a real job on her hands, but the only way out of a difficulty such as yours is to spend a little less time on housework and a little more time with your husband. Get him to help you plan your work so that you will have a little freedom each day. You'll find your work much easier and far more interesting. A little recreation now and then is necessary for all of us.

SYNOPSIS

Enrico de Solano y Vasquez, proud and romantic Spaniard, claims the 1776 for King Philip's Spain the land surrounding San Francisco Bay. The Vasquez hacienda is erected on the vast and beautiful acres overlooking the bay, and life moves along in the idyllic and carefree manner of Old Spain. In 1838 two grandsons and their mother are the last of the proud line. The discovery of gold disturbs their peaceful existence. The eldest grandson is cruelly slain.

At this moment the young Don Hernandez gained the stable yard. His intense fury must have shown in his face because the sailors suddenly spurred their stolen horses and galloped through the arch and away, leaving Stoner to face the consequences of his own brutality.

Stoner realized he had gone too far to retreat. One look into the young white face staring at him across the bullet torn body was sufficient to urge action. Clumsily swinging into the saddle he headed for the open road, cocked pistol in hand. With only a few yards between them and this last remaining son of the house of Vasquez! But his mount stumbled and the deadly shot lodged in the earth.

Livid with fury young Vasquez been standing by in sordid silence, crossed themselves. Their man's soul had passed on to join his ancestor's. One peon slipped away to the chapel and began fumbling with the bell ropes.

Senora Vasquez, with head erect, had watched the whole scene from the time her young son had whirled the lariat. She knew that her first born was dead. She watched with unflinching eyes while her last boy fought so valiantly to avenge their name. When the fight was over she calmly joined her sons and laying a gentle hand on the living boy's head said bravely, "You have done a Vasquez."

Through her blurred eyes she looked beyond to their burial plot and saw the graves and crosses of other Vasquezes who had gone before. Ah, death did have a sting and her Mother's heart felt its cruel torture!

The little chapel bells rang mournfully, and guests on their way to the Vasquez estate turned back, or came on only to offer sympathy.

And all through the night the chapel bells tolled their sad news.

Adventurous ruffians from all parts of the world began congregating in California to dig for their pot of gold; and San Francisco, the peaceful little home of the romantic Spaniards, became a seething cauldron of crazed activity. Houses were looted, stores were Men gambled and consumed liquor in the rough care-free spirit of mining camp life. In short, the Spanish village had become the mecca of a gold mad world. The harbor was crowded with ships of all descriptions and many nationalities, and on the shores a myriad of tents appeared to shelter the shifting population. Frame shacks were erected over night and when not used as homes served as supply bases for tools and provisions.

A regular procession almost constantly passed by the Vasquez estate and Hernandez, the new master of the house, was wont to watch from the balcony with folded arms and a frown upon his face, but in his heart was a boyish restlessness that was difficult to suppress. Senora Vasquez was always slightly contemptuous of the rabble and hated the rush because its lustful influence had been responsible for her son's death. Her aristocratic breeding and love for beauty made her senses rebel against the sight of wagons loaded with camping outfits, kitchen utensils, household furnishings and unkempt, red fannel shirted men as they passed her door and ruined the beautiful serenity of life. To her it was obnoxious to be forced to see Mexicans, Indians, negroes, splendid white men and Chinks all pawning their loot together and going off to the fields like brothers.

The Senora could not understand why women would give up an easy, pleasant life to follow their wandering husbands to the new gold territory and she never ceased to be amazed at the sight of husbands and wife struggling along under the weight of heavy packs and dragging young children by the hands in their efforts to make speed.

Vasquez and his mother were literally sitting on their doorstep watching the world go by. A world peopled by creatures so remote in ambitions and desires from their own high minded and chivalrous instincts that there was no mutual ground of understanding.

For instance, they saw a hard-faced "Madam" drive past with a bevy of painted girls. Reckless followers of the gold diggers sitting on chairs in the wagon bed. One of them called, waved and smirked to get the attention of two men on another wagon, who were straddling a board and playing cards while they jogged along.

His pistol fell from lifeless fingers and he sank to the ground.

The Senora could not understand why women would give up an easy, pleasant life to follow their wandering husbands to the new gold territory and she never ceased to be amazed at the sight of husbands and wife struggling along under the weight of heavy packs and dragging young children by the hands in their efforts to make speed.

Vasquez and his mother were literally sitting on their doorstep watching the world go by. A world peopled by creatures so remote in ambitions and desires from their own high minded and chivalrous instincts that there was no mutual ground of understanding.

For instance, they saw a hard-faced "Madam" drive past with a bevy of painted girls. Reckless followers of the gold diggers sitting on chairs in the wagon bed. One of them called, waved and smirked to get the attention of two men on another wagon, who were straddling a board and playing cards while they jogged along.

A regular procession almost constantly passed by the Vasquez estate and Hernandez, the new master of the house, was wont to watch from the balcony with folded arms and a frown upon his face, but in his heart was a boyish restlessness that was difficult to suppress. Her aristocratic breeding and love for beauty made her senses rebel against the sight of wagons loaded with camping outfits, kitchen utensils, household furnishings and unkempt, red fannel shirted men as they passed her door and ruined the beautiful serenity of life. AND THE WORST IS YET TO COME

EDUCATION IN FUN PLAYING AT CALIFORNIA

If you wish to laugh, go to college.

Thousands of people are taking a fun course at the California Theatre, where Buster Keaton is holding forth on the screen in his new proto-cream, "College," a spectacular United Artists feature with a campus background.

Imagine frozen-faced Buster as a flashily-attired rah rah boy and would-be athlete? Getting into a seamy, a minute—and getting out of them in the most ludicrous ways imaginable?

The story of "College" first introduces Keaton as an awkward, bookwormish sort of youth. He is a mamma's boy in high school, and when he enters the university, he is imbued with the idea of winning medals as a scholar. Then along comes a girl (Ann Cornwall), who fires ambitions in the model student.

He suddenly gets an overwhelming yen for athletics and loud clothes, because the girl tells him he'll have to furnish inspiration for the cheer-leaders and campus Beau Brummels before she'll let him ring her door-bell. Buster follows her suggestion—with startling results. He dolls up like an ad for Klever Klotches shop and offers his services to all the athletic coaches.

The coaches are so delighted with the volunteer athlete that they kick him off the field every time he reports for duty. His rivals for the hand of the college belle lend plenty of aid in making the youth's life miserable.

How he unexpectedly performs the athletic feats he has dreamed of, wins the girl and is acclaimed as a real hero furnish a sensational climax.

Some of the supporting players who share honors with Buster in the United Artists comedy are Ann Cornwall, leading lady; Grant Withers, Harold Goodwin, Shitz Edwards, James Mack, Buddy Mason and Flora Bramley.

In addition, scores of world-famous athletes are seen in action at leading universities.

Produced by Joseph M. Schenck, "College" easily ranks as one of the outstanding comedies of the past three years.

Other features include "Making a King," an authentic picture featuring H. R. H. "The Prince of Wales"; "Felix the Cat"; and "International News."

Three Millions Saving Money

Six years ago 1,771,574 persons had savings accounts in California banks. On June 30, 1927, the number increased to 3,069,464 and the aggregate deposits totaled $1,698,729,000—average of $553. Official figures further show that 620 persons out of every thousand are now saving money, whereas in 1921 only 469 out of every thousand were saving.

The statistics prove that a very large number of persons have not found it difficult to save. On the contrary, it is easy to accumulate funds. A one-dollar bill, for example, will open a saving account in any office or branch of the American Trust Company, and the deposits will earn four per cent interest, compounded semi-annually.

Former Key Chief Killed As Auto Plunges From Highway

WALNUT CREEK, Oct. 14.—George St. Pierre, 65, retired superintendent of equipment for the Key System Transit Company, was killed last night when the car he was driving plunged from the tunnel road, one mile west of Walnut Creek.

With Mrs. St. Pierre he was en route from Oakland to his home near Walnut Creek. Authorities believe his car skidded while St. Pierre was endeavoring to pass another machine. His wife suffered cuts and bruises and it is feared she may have incurred internal injuries.

Jack Kitchen, Jr., of Walnut Creek, who was driving near the scene when the accident occurred, summoned Dr. Arthur H. Beede, who found St. Pierre had suffered a fractured skull. He died en route to a hospital.

Mrs. St. Pierre remained last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Bradshaw in Walnut Creek, where she was under treatment. The car in which the St. Pierres were riding was wrecked. St. Pierre resigned his position with the Key System in 1925 and retired to a ranch near Walnut Creek.

The body of St. Pierre was taken to Oakland this afternoon the funeral to be held under the direction of Mrs. Ruby Harlan from the Albert Brown parlors Monday afternoon. St. Pierre was a member of the Masons, Scottish Rite and Ahimsa Temple of the Shrine. The widow, Mrs. Florence St. Pierre, was reported today to be considerably improved. Deceased also leaves two daughters, Mrs. Blanche Ritter of Manila, P. I., and Mrs. Antoinette Goldworthy of Oakland. Burial will take place in the Masonic plot in Mountain View cemetery.

S. F. Bridge Project Gets Disapproval of War Dept.

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—Plans for a bridge across San Francisco Bay from Alameda to Rincon Hill, San Francisco, were disapproved by the War Department today.

Construction of a bridge north of the Hunters Point-Alameda line will not meet with War Department approval. Secretary of War Davis notified the San Francisco delegation which urged such a location.

WOULD IMPEDE SHIPPING
The War Department opposed the proposed site on the ground that a bridge there would interfere with navigation as the port of San Francisco develops and impair the usefulness of the harbor in national defense.

For a quarter of a century San Francisco has been seeking permission to build a bridge across the bay that would lead directly into the heart of the city.

"DEFENSE HANDICAP"
Action of the War Department follows receipt of a letter from the secretary of the navy in which it was stated that the proposed Rincon Hill-Alameda route would be a serious handicap to national defense. The war department announcement said:

The effects on navigation of a crossing at any of the sites proposed were features to which the federal government gave special consideration. The importance of these features both locally and nationally were recognized in a thorough and comprehensive study of the subject.

BEST PORT ON COAST
San Francisco bay is at present the most important harbor on the Pacific coast. The growing importance of the Pacific ocean makes the preservation of this harbor a matter of the highest concern to the national government.

"It's value for commercial purposes as well as for national defense requires that nothing be done to impair its full usefulness. It may be compared to the harbor of New York on the Atlantic coast. At New York the means of crossing the vital parts of the harbor toward the mainland have been provided by tunnels and ferries and not by the mainland have been provided by tunnels and ferries and not by bridges.

TO "PRESERVE" BAY
The existing policy as to the bridging of San Francisco bay is intended to protect this harbor from serious injury and preserve it for future use. The way is left open for the construction of tunnels, and for bridges in those locations where the usefulness of the harbor will not be impaired.

"The communications between San Francisco and the east side of the bay can be improved without obstructing the harbor with a bridge in a location where its presence will be a constant menace to navigation and a handicap to national defense. The objections on the latter ground were brought out in a letter from the secretary of the navy under date of July 13, 1927.

POTENTIALLY GREAT
"Extensive growth is expected on the Pacific Coast and the country tributary thereto. The number of potentially great harbors on the Pacific coast is limited and the distances between them are large. San Francisco must be looked on therefore as a potentially great national harbor.

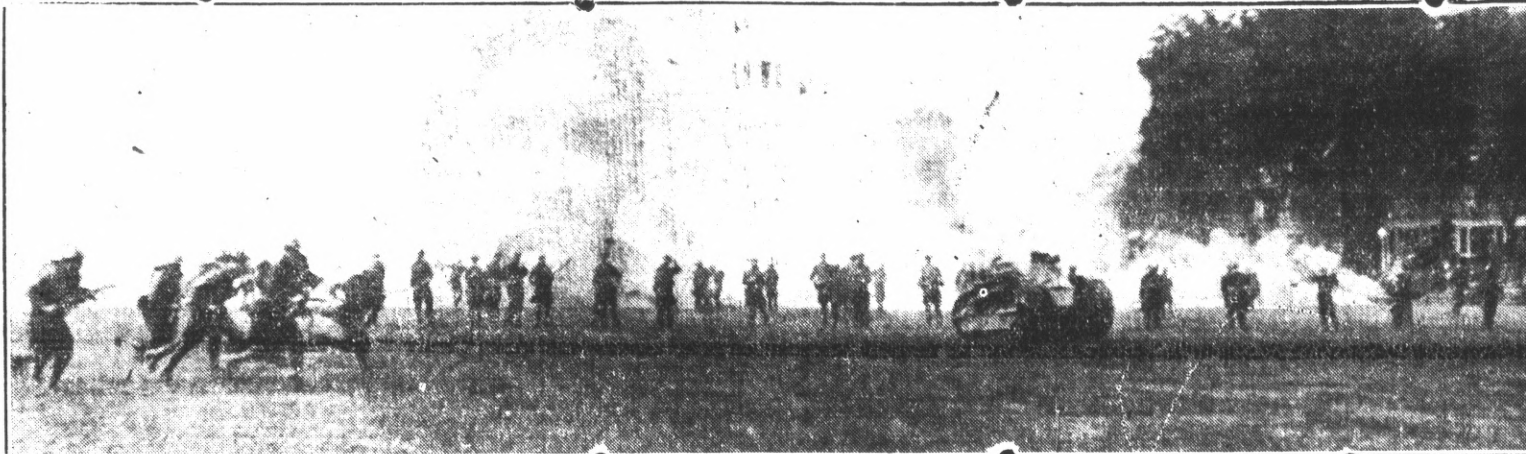

"Any doubt as to whether a bridge would interfere with the proper development of navigation in this port, should be resolved in favor of the national interest of navigation rather than the advantage to local highway traffic.

NAVY FOR IMPROVEMENT
"The department is ready to further any improvement in communications which will not conflict with the major duty of preserving the navigable capacity of San Francisco for the future needs of the nation.

"Under the existing policy plans can be approved for a bridge from Hunters Point to Alameda, only 4 miles south of the site proposed. Such a crossing would save a great distance as compared with the present land route at the southern end of the bay, and would undoubtedly reduce the congestion on the ferries."

Preacher Keeps Faith Restoring Old Bibles

(By Universal Service)

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—A little Chicago basement, a Baptist minister is carrying on the work he pledged himself to a score of years ago—rebinding and restoring Bibles.

He is the Rev. Clifford C. Mefferd. His workshop, a dimly lighted place, radiates the spirit of painstaking that seems to animate him.

A singular craft is his, one which brings him into touch with remote part of the earth. For Bibles, worn and cracked as to binding, dog-eared as to leaf, come to him from India, from stretches of Australian wastes; from the jungles of Africa; from China; from Tibet—and from humble homes in this country.

Torn, frayed, yellowed with age, these Bibles come treasured because of some association with the past dear to their owners. New Bibles are easily obtained, but no, the old ones that mother and grandfather, and perhaps great-grandfather treasured are preferable.

Trump's Bible
The Rev. Mefferd was re-enforcing the binding of a well-worn New Testament when interviewed.

"The man who brought this was apparently a tramp," he said kindly. "His shoes were about as broken as the binding of this book. I believe that he does not possess deep religious faith, nor hope of attainment, other than an occasional windfall of a dollar or two. He had a quarter, he said, with which to pay me for several hours of my time. The quarter had been given him by his mother."

The Rev. Mefferd then pointed to a Bible that had been cut in half, dividing the New from the Old Testament.

"I'm going to put separate covers on each half," he said. "The owner of the book told me his story when he brought it in. It's interesting."

"He is a Swede, about 55. In his native land, as a youth, he had been a renegade. He got his living by highway robbery. He finally became as deeply involved with the authorities that he fled to this country."

"Continuing his nefarious pursuits he was sitting as a 'house player' about fifteen years ago, in a poker game in Chicago's badlands on West Madison street. He had succeeded in manipulating the cards so that he had given himself a small straight flush against four nines and two full houses. Just as the betting began, he told me something hit him a violent blow behind the ear. Something, he insisted, not a human being.

Started The Players
"He was knocked from his seat. When he picked himself up he studied the startled group of players. Not one human being had been within striking distance of him. He swore to that."

"The blow was a revelation to him, highwayman, a gambler, a 'nec-do-well', a bad man, became a city missionary. And the Bible he brought in to be rebound in two volumes was the same one given to him the night he dropped into the mission, by a woman worker."

"Do you know why he wanted the Bible in two volumes? Once, he explained, he relied for protection upon two revolvers that he had carried about with him. Now, basing his faith upon the word of God, and remembering the assurance he got from the feeling of the pressure in his two pockets, he wanted to substitute Godly weapons for the revolvers."

SPORTS

BEARS EXPECT TO WIN OVER ORE. SATURDAY

(By Universal Service)
PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 14.—An atmosphere of quiet confidence pervades the entire personnel of the California football team on the eve of their first conference clash with the University of Oregon tomorrow at Multnomah Field here.

This quiet confidence is reflected in the attitude of the coaches, advisory council and the players.

Seeking a reason for this condition, which is the reverse of the sentiments usually expressed preceding an important game, we were confronted with a mass of football logic, the crux of which amounts to this:

"If St. Mary's with an admittedly strong line could not hold us, it does not stand to reason that Oregon with an admittedly weak line can hope for any better success."

In all discussions of the impending game, it invariably flows into this optimistic and soothing channel.

"Nibs" Price does not regard Oregon in the sad light of a "push-over" neither do his assistants, Boles Rosenthal, Clint Evans, and Dan McMillan nor are the players themselves laboring under any such delusions.

McEwan has an improved team this year over the eleven that last fall was good enough, in one game, at least, to further assist in the woeful subjugation of the Bears, 21 to 13.

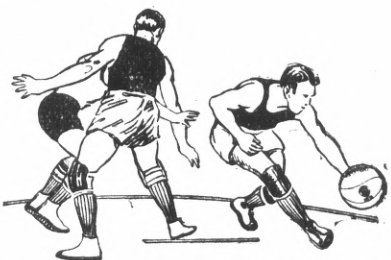

The Bears are going into the game tomorrow prepared for a hard contest and prepared to throw every ounce of fight at their command into the fray. They are willing to grant the Webfooters more credit than the meticulous report of the scouts would warrant, but in spite of this, one cannot help but feel and be impressed by the quiet confidence that in all around you and that augurs for victory.

A few think the Bears will win by three touchdowns. Others more given to the mournful traditions of the sport and who feel that a certain dignity should surround any statements issued by them, however informal, look for a 16 point victory while the optimistic pessimists say they will be satisfied with any kind of a margin so long as the final result cannot be disputed.

Narcotic Vender Escapes Court

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—After waiting for over an hour in District Criminal Court to be sentenced for violating the Harrison narcotic laws, Jacob Solomon, alias Jack Rose, of New York, walked out today and escaped.

His beautiful French companion, Miss Andree Du Bois fled with him. She, however, became "lost" in the corridors of the building and was captured as she inquired a way out of the maze.

Solomon and Miss Du Bois were arrested in this city last February after Detectives had trapped them in a $17,500 sale of narcotics. Police declared that $22,000 worth of narcotics were found in their hotel room and charged they were heads of a drug head of wide proportions. Seven other members of the alleged "ring" were later arrested in New York and other cities.

Solomon was convicted and faced a maximum of 35 years in prison and a $14,000 fine. Miss Du Bois has not yet been tried. Both were brought into court today and sentenced. When Solomon's case was called, neither could be found. A near panic ensued.

Miss Du Bois was formerly hostess at Solomon's Melody night club in New York.

Woman Recovers By Auto-Suggestion

LONDON, Oct. 14.—From the little village of Bozot, on the borders of Northamptonshire and Bedfordshire comes the strange story of a woman who, after being in a trance for twelve months, recovered by her own strength of will.

She attributes her recovery to auto-suggestion, while a friend who was with her during her illness says it was the patient's iron nerve that saved her.

For twenty years, Mrs. Longland, wife of a farmer, has been a bed-ridden invalid, and for the past four years she has had to be artificially fed. During this period she lost her powers of speech and movement, and lay in a trance.

Recently the invalid tried to struggle up in bed, and a few hours later she sat up, complaining of hunger, and ate a hearty meal. A few months ago Mrs. Longland weighed only 55 pounds but now she turns the scale at 100 pounds.

Richmond Grid Eleven Holds Berkeley To Small Score

Although they were outweighed nearly 30 pounds, Coach Ivan Hill's R. U. H. S. eleven held the Berkeley high football squad to a score of 13 to 0 in a well fought game on the Berkeley field yesterday afternoon.

In the first quarter of the game neither side scored, the local team holding the husky College City men. In the second quarter, the Berkeleyites on a long pass made the first touchdown.

Their second touchdown was made in the third quarter. After Ransom carried the ball to the one-yard line, the Berkeley team in three plunges went over for a score.

Baldwin's kicking did much for keeping the opposing team from additional scores. Coach Hill last night said he was well satisfied with the game and that while the team did not score another victory, they played the best brand of football this season. Jackson at center was up to his stuff all through the game.

Few penalties, two on each side marked the playing. There were few off-sides.

The starting lineup was: Jackson, center; Rountree and Dalmantini at guard; Neckel and Schaeffer, tackles; Arnold and Fitzpatrick, ends and Williams, Baldwin, Searcella and Swenson in the backfield.

The local team will play Centerville next Friday.

A Friend In need

A TEA-KETTLE scalded a sandwich knife slipping and gashing a finger . . . children in a scramble—a bruised knee. Bad accidents demand quick relief. You run to the medicine cabinet, to the pantry for makeshift remedies, with one thought, "Will it do?" You know it has to be pure for that open wound; you have to depend upon its being safe to use.

If you read the advertisements, you know what is safe to use. You know the names behind products that make them safe. You know the best friends to call on when in need. Not only in accidents, but in daily affairs—in the things you put on your table, give children to put in their mouths or next to their skin—you want pure value. Things you can trust. Advertisements teach them to you. Advertisements are your friends. They make you friends of the best you can buy. They save you worry and money. The talcum, vanilla, baking soda talked about to thousands are used by so many thousands you get sure value at low cost.

Taft, Calif. April 19, 1927. Fong Wan Herb Co., Oakland, Calif.

Gentlemen, I suffered from leakage of the heart, enlargement, pain and high blood pressure. The pain extended to my back and left arm. I tried many local physicians, but found no relief at all.

After I had seen your advertisement about "overcoming Heart Trouble" I decided to write to you for Herbs. Your Herb treatment is indeed wonderful. When I had finished taking a four-week supply of the herbs, all my pain had left me.

You deserve unstinted praise for what you have done for me. I shall continue to take the herbs until I am certain that I have completely recovered and am sound and healthy in every respect.

Best Dinner? No, Breakfast

ALABAMA LOCALE, "YES, SUH!"

And It's Hotcakes He Takes

Al Abrahams, well known Richmond merchant, is sponsor for the following story of "best eats." The best meal he ever ate, says Abrahams, was a breakfast, way down in Alabama when he was a boy of 10 years of age.

During the hot summer months it was the custom for business men to send their families to the mountains. Abrahams, his sister, and a colored maid made the trip one summer when the temperature was at its highest. (Abrahams makes no excuse re: "It's not the altitude, it's the humidity.")

"The altitude had the effect of stimulating our appetites when we finally got there," Abrahams states. "But outside of that, here's the reason why I enjoyed one particular meal above all others:

"The plumbing in the cottage failed completely and water had to be carried from a spring, uphill, for more than a half-mile.

"One morning, before breakfast, by sister and I told the maid we would carry the water for a big washing for her if she would cook our morning meal. She agreed.

"The sun rises in Alabama at about 6 o'clock. It was waiting for us when we started to carry that water. Any by the time we finished, we were tired to exhaustion, and hungry as bears.

"Breakfast? That was like a look into paradise. First we had fruit, ham and eggs, and finally hot cakes.

Abrahams paused before saying the word, "hotcakes."

"Those hotcakes, they were good. And finally my sister and I decided on a race to see who could eat the most.

"I won with a score of 26—she 25, and probably could have eaten more but the batter gave

KEY PROMISES EXTENSION TO INNER HARBOR

The Key System Transit company will extend its Sixth street carline southward to the inner harbor, according to informal promises of the company made in conference with the city council. A meeting was called to discuss various phases of the three new franchises sought by the company here.

The extension will serve the new Ford plant and other industries that may locate near the inner harbor.

The company wants one franchise to cover its main line from the Richmond-San Rafael ferry to El Cerrito a second for its Twenty-third and east Macdonald avenue line and a third for the Sixth street line. The franchises run for 50 years and after a discussion by the members it is believed that there will be no opposition to the request.

The Transit company has offered to honor transfers to a

WOMAN SAVES CHILDREN IN BLAZING HOME

WALNUT CREEK, Oct. 14.—Twice yesterday afternoon Mrs. L. D. Tyer of Saranap, near Walnut Creek, dashed into a flame-filled sleeping porch to carry to safety her two infant children, Marie, 2½ years old, and James, who is not quite 2.

Mrs. Tyer, who was at work in her kitchen when she saw flames and smoke shooting from the windows of the porch in which her children were sleeping, first carried James to safety.

After setting the child safely down outside the blazing house she again dashed through the flames to carry Marie to safety.

Carrying the children with her, she then ran 200 yards to the home of Harry Boomer, her nearest neighbor.

Despite her two dashes into the fire to save her children, Mrs. Tyer refused to listen to the pleas of the Boomers that she rest after her rescue work. With Boomer and other neighbors attracted by the flames, she returned to her home and attempted to battle the blaze, which razed the place, causing a damage estimated at $6,000.

Boomer, before leaving to battle the blaze, summoned the Walnut Creek fire department. The volunteer fire fighters were unable to control the fire, and when the department arrived after a two-mile run over country roads the house was a mass of flames.

Heirlooms, which included family silverware, portraits and valuable rugs, were destroyed in the fire.

While Mrs. Tyer was battling the fire which destroyed her home Tyer was at work with the Pacific Gas and Electric Company in Oakland. Her two older children, Alice, 13, and Bertine, 10, were attending the Saranap grammar school.

"Mechanical Man" Brings "Metropolis" Up to Date

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—A "mechanical man" has been given a job as watchman at the new Dale Carlin Water Plant Reservoir here, government engineers made known today.

This automaton works 24 hours a day. It answers the telephone at the reservoir office and tells all who call up the exact height of the water level of the reservoir. It repeats the information twice for each call and then hangs up the hook, or "rings off" as they say.

Dewey Radcliffe of Riverdale, Md., invented the "mechanical man." It is in reality an electric contrivance, attached to the telephone at the reservoir.

The automaton's reservoir number is "unlimited," the engineers or employees of the Water Department who desire to know the level of water in the reservoir call this secret number known to them as "the dummy."

When the bell rings, it caused the "mechanical man" to raise the receiver from the hook. Other apparatus, connected with floats on a gauge in the reservoir, causes a series of buzzes to be given. The buzzes are transmitted into the telephone by a loud-speaker device six buzzes means the water in the reservoir is six feet deep, an illustration.

The "mechanical man" saves a watchman's salary of three shifts of eight hours each, the engineers stated. "He" never makes a mistake, but answers every call night or day.
